PURPOSE OF PROGRAMME

Wealth Succession has increasingly become the focus in wealth management. This is especially evident in Asia, which is the region with the highest growth in high net worth and ultra-high net worth individuals (HNWIs and UHNWIs). In Singapore, for most companies that are family-owned, wealth succession and transfer is very much linked to Asian values, duty and family. This brings about a unique set of challenges to Wealth and Business succession planning. Many of these wealthy individuals are often self-made and are approaching retirement age, which means they are facing the prospect of passing on their wealth for the first time.

Generally, the patriarch's and founder's tendency is for their family members or relatives to inherit their business and wealth and has designated this as 'their duty'. In Asian countries like Singapore, many HNWIs and UHNWIs now recognize that wealth succession goes beyond mere inheritance- that preserving family values for future business activities and putting in good family governance will be key and a priority.

With the continuously evolving regulatory environment in Asia and around the world, many HNWIs and UHNWIs today often face multi-jurisdictional and compliance issues as well as legal and tax challenges to transfer their wide-ranging family wealth structures to the next generation.

The trainer will highlight the multi-faceted aspects of wealth and business succession transfer in today's globalized world, as many HNWIs have assets that are spread globally, and often have family members that are living abroad across several different countries. This leaves them facing jurisdictional and compliance issues as well as legal and tax challenges in their efforts to financially plan for their retirement and the future preservation and efficient transfer of their wealth.

The trainer will share the major reasons why some rich Asians fall behind in succession planning, which arises from procrastination, lack of communication, and complexity of the process. While some of these delays may be attributed to the client's actions or inaction, part of the reason may also fall on the intermediaries – insurance advisers, wealth advisers, relationship managers, and brokers.

The trainer believes that lack of knowledge and initiative from both parties often leads to procrastination or the topic itself not being raised during financial discussions. Tools, concepts like family trusts and financial products such as life insurance can be applied to solve the complex issues arising from estate planning. A patriarch or founder may have idealistic outcomes of their wealth and business when they pass on.

In particular, these useful viable tools can play a critical role in any successful wealth transfer plan if used correctly as it can provide a solid financial foundation and serves as a versatile tool to protect business assets, family, partners and key employees from an unexpected death, which will be covered in the various real-life cases in the training materials.

The trainer will share how critical it is for financial planners and advisers to change their mindset and recognize wealth and business succession planning as an opportunity for them to cultivate a longer, more productive partnership, not limiting to their current clients, but also with the heirs who will be the future HNWI and UHNWIs, which could last for many generations if managed and plan properly via useful tools, mediums or run it efficiently via private trust companies and family offices.

Furthermore, the trainer advocates life financial planners and advisers to evaluate their product offerings and become more agile as well as to diversify their product suite with wealth succession solutions in response to changing market demands and trends in order to better meet the changing needs of their HNWI and UHNWIs and clientele.

The programme combines a mix of practical training e.g., around HNWI and UHNW wealth succession solutions as well as market insights on key trends and developments among the HNWI and UHNW market segment today and coming over the horizon. This is backed by the cases in the materials as part of the extensive research on the high-net-worth segment.

The participants will be able to accumulate a great deal of insight into the needs and desires of our HNWI customers. From the deliverables and using those insights, participants are able to develop wealth succession solutions and initiatives to meet the needs and preferences of HNWIs and UHNW customers and deliver them competitive and customer-centric products of good value and relevant advice that solve their problems and meet their needs.
