PURPOSE OF PROGRAMME

Tax planning is a key aspect of wealth management. The focus of this course will be on taxes that impact individuals, companies and trusts in the context of estate and succession planning for private clients.

This course will introduce the general tax environment in Singapore, broadly categorized into individual and corporate tax aspects. Participants will understand how an individual's residence and domicile will determine the individual's liability to tax in any country. In addition, participants will look at the corporate tax rates of income for Singapore and other jurisdictions. The trainer will share the usage and tax treatment of Singapore companies as holding companies, for holding specific assets, for trading and other business activities as well as holding of Intellectual Property assets, for licensing and as investment companies.

While estate duty has been abolished in Singapore, an individual's country of domicile may impact the amount of the death taxes payable. Financial practitioners managing clients from different countries or Singaporeans with cross border investment(s) need to be aware of prevailing death tax regulations. While it is assumed that a company's country of incorporation is where it will operate its business, there are instances where it may not be the case. In determining the tax status of the company, the country where the company's "management and control" is exercised will determine the tax residency of the company.

The trainer will highlight the taxation of Estates and Trusts that arise from the administration of estates. The income of a trust is considered as statutory income of the trustee. The executors and trustees of a Will, will be responsible for reporting income and tax on the income generated from the assets under administration. There will be discussion on the tax treatment on living trusts, the liability to tax and tax treatment vis-à-vis the settlor, beneficiaries and trustees. Participants will also be introduced to what is the applicable tax treatment and reporting aspects on foreign settlors and beneficiaries receiving distributions.

In addition to Singapore's competitive tax rates, strong economic and political environment, the Singapore government has in place incentives to facilitate Singapore as a global wealth management centre. Participants will explore the tax exemptions, concessionary tax rates and incentives in place. With the Global Investor Programme (GIP), an investor who obtains Singapore Permanent Residence status can either start a business or invest in Singapore. The trainer will offer a glimpse of the business profiles under the GIP and the qualifying criteria along with the tax regime governing the family office. In addition, to strengthen Singapore's position as a regional hub, MAS has approved a new company structure known as the Variable Capital Company (VCC). The trainer will explore the tax treatment of a VCC. The programme will also delve into the tax aspects in relation to real estate.

The programme combines a mix of knowledge based yet practical perspectives understanding the latest tax considerations when planning the wealth management solutions to the HNWI and UHNWI clients. Half a day will be devoted to in-depth discussion on case studies to allow participants to apply the concepts learnt and to engage in a meaningful exchange of ideas where they contribute more ideas and perspective from dissecting each case study.
